The Conflict of the Nineteenth Century.

BY JOHN D. WHITTIER.
When Freedom on her natal day, Within her war-torn cradle lay,
An iron man around her stood, Baptized her infant form with blood, And through the storms that round her swept Their constant ward and watching kept.
Then, when the quiet hours repose,
The halcyon days of peace and ease,
And brethren of a common tongue,
To mortal strife in figures spring.
And every gift on Freedom's altar Was man for feast and blood for war.
Our fathers to their graves have gone,
Their staves are over their temples worn;
But nobler conflicts wait the race That rises in their honored place—A mortal warfare with the crime And filth of an evil time.

VARIETY.
A piano affords a young lady a chance to show her finger and her finger-ring.
They say the Empress of India dislikes to be seen wearing spectacles in public.
A Franklin (Pa.) girl says she would rather be a dozen widows than one old maid.
Greenbacks may come to pass, but the rest of the family will take them from him.
When a widow with children marries she becomes a pa-taker at the wedding-feast.
A New Orleans writer says that the telegraphic art has reached such a point that long courships have been maintained between persons hundreds of miles apart, and some lovelorn telegraph-ist has invented a telegraphic sign for love's first sweet kiss.
Dr. Cumming the distinguished Millenarian divine of London, has discovered that before September, 1876, there would not have been a fulfillment of the prophecies which will be fulfilled in the year 1876, and the heavens and earth will be removed.
It is not an unusual thing, now-a-days, for pedestrians in Kentucky, where meat showers out, to witness wild-eyed men gesticulating skyward and yelling: "No more corned beef!
Send down some quail on toast." Fifteen thousand dollars in gold will now buy an American lady a decent outfit to be married in, and there's no use talking about prices going any lower.
Some body asked a young lady the other evening if she didn't think the serial literature of the country was at its best just now. She said she did, decidedly; there were the loveliest patterns in Harper's Bazar she had ever seen.

A Kansas paper speaks of an astonishing lady living near Leavenworth who has been divorced twice, married three times, and now cares for a mixed family of thirteen children, none of which are her own.
"Well, doctor," inquired an anxious Tatter husband, "and what do you think is the matter with my wife?" "Oh, nothing serious; possibly a little humor of the blood." "No, that can't be, doctor, that can't be," she said, "she's been out for ten days past."
An old man fell asleep in a New Hampshire church on a recent Sunday afternoon, and his nose got wedged into a book-peg so that he couldn't get it out. After he had thrashed about and snored a good while, the sexton released him by splitting open the rack.
A judge in Monmouth county, N. J., once cautioned an old negro who had been acquitted not to be bad company again. "Much 'blige to you, Marsa," he replied, "I allus 'spech you advice; but de fact an' Marsa, dat good company and bad company look so much alike dat de niggh can't tell de difference until he git right in em!"
Some people seem to be extremely sensitive.
At one of the churches on Sunday the minister read the prayer for a person in deep affliction, and a man who had just been married got up and went out. He said he was a public sympathy obtunded on him in that way. [Norwich Bulletin.]

The editor of a country paper wrote one evening:
"To-day is the anniversary of the death of Louis Phillips." When the printer's proof came up the name read "Sam Phillips." The editor wrote on the margin "who the deuce is Sam Phillips?" Next morning the article read:
"To-day is the anniversary of the death of Sam Phillips. Who the deuce is Sam Phillips?"

The advocates of phonetic spelling have singularly neglected to avail themselves of every public writer's weariness over the words "Centennial Exhibition" as a plea with which to get their theories into favor. Every newspaper writer on the continent would look with favor upon a proposition to write "Centllyl," or "CenXyl," or "CenYl," or any other abbreviation form of the word, which must be used many times in every newspaper.

Man is the only animal that blows his nose.
The elephant has a nose two feet long, but he never blows it. The elephant can reach over his nose and tickle his hind legs, and he often does; but he never wipes it. The blue-nose baboon has a peculiar proboscis of which the noblest animal might be proud, but it goes unblown. The double-nose pointer has an immense capacity for blowing, but he never will; and the oyster, whose nose reaches clean round his back, refrains from exercising it. Man alone has reached to a point of a handkerchief, and he proudly waves his banner as a sufficient evidence of superiority.

When Mr. Webster visited England, after he had attended fame enough to precede him, an English gentleman took him one day to see Lord Brougham. That eminent Briton received our Daniel with such coolness that he was glad to get away and back to his rooms. The friend who had taken him on his return to Lord Brougham in haste and anger:
"My lord, how could you behave with such unseemly rudeness and discourtesy to so great a lawyer and statesman? It was insulting to him, and has filled me with indignation, they made a royal night of it—Harper's Magazine for June.
